

MODERN APPROACHES TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE POLITICAL-LEGAL EDUCATION SYSTEM

Saydig'aniyev Ilhomjon Oybek oglu

Abstract: This article analyzes modern approaches to the development of political and legal education, its role, and significance in societal development. It also examines ways to improve political and legal education using digital technologies, interactive teaching methods, and a competency-based approach. The research findings have theoretical and practical implications for educational reforms aimed at enhancing political and legal culture.

Keywords: political science and legal education, legal culture, civil society, digital education, competency-based approach.

Introduction

In today's conditions of globalization and democratic reforms, the development of the political and legal education system is one of the urgent issues. The rise of legal consciousness and political culture in society is ensured, first of all, through an effective education system. Political and legal education plays an important role in the understanding of the constitutional rights and freedoms of citizens, active participation in public administration, and the formation of civic responsibility.

In the current period, the role and importance of the political and legal education system in the process of building a democratic society is increasingly increasing. The stability of society, the rule of law, and the effectiveness of public administration directly depend on the level of legal consciousness and political culture of citizens. In this regard, political and legal education is not only an educational institution, but also an important institution that shapes the socio-political position of an individual[1].

In the conditions of globalization, the sharp increase in the flow of information, the complexity of political processes, and the expansion of the digital space require the introduction of new approaches to the political and legal education system. Being limited to traditional educational methods does not fully meet today's requirements.

Therefore, the scientific study of modern concepts for the development of political and legal education is an urgent issue.

Methodology

This study is of a theoretical and analytical nature, and a number of general and special methods were used. In particular:

The analysis and synthesis method was used to study scientific literature, pedagogical concepts and regulatory legal documents related to political and legal education;

The comparative method identified the advantages and disadvantages of traditional and modern educational approaches;

A systematic approach made it possible to consider political and legal education as a single system and determine the relationship between its components;

The method of logical analysis and generalization was used to draw scientific conclusions based on the data obtained.

Main part

1. The content and significance of the political and legal education system

The political and legal education system serves to form legal knowledge, political thinking and a civic position in a person. This type of education is the foundation of a democratic society and creates the basis for the establishment of the principles of the rule of law and justice. Through political and legal education, a conscious attitude of young people to the life of the state and society is formed[2].

2. Modern approaches to the development of political and legal education

The following modern approaches are currently gaining importance in the development of political and legal education:

Competency-based approach - aimed at forming not only theoretical knowledge in students, but also practical skills and social activity.

Interactive teaching methods - through discussion, debate, case studies, role-playing games, students' independent thinking skills are developed.

Digital educational technologies - online platforms, electronic textbooks and distance learning tools - make it possible to bring political and legal knowledge to the masses.

An integrative approach - organizing education based on the inextricable link between political science, law, sociology and history.

3. Political and legal education and legal culture

Political and legal education is an important factor in the formation of legal culture. In a society with a high level of legal culture, respect for the law, social responsibility and civic activity are strong. Therefore, it is important to use an approach based on national and universal values in the educational process.

Results

The results of the study showed that the following modern approaches are of particular importance in the development of the political and legal education system.

1. The importance of the competency-based approach

The competency-based approach is aimed at combining knowledge, skills and qualifications with practical activities in the educational process. This approach to political and legal education:

- analyzes legal situations;
- develops a conscious attitude to the law;
- understands civic duty;
- develops the skills to evaluate socio-political decisions.

Through this approach, learners transform from passive listeners into active participants[3].

2. Digital and innovative technologies

The use of digital technologies in modern political and legal education increases the quality of education. Online courses, electronic textbooks, interactive platforms and virtual simulations serve to consolidate knowledge. In particular, virtual trials, online debates and testing systems develop students' legal thinking.

3. Student-centered educational approach

In this approach, the student's personality is at the center of the educational process.

Methods such as discussion, debate, case study, project-based learning allow for a deeper understanding of political and legal issues. As a result, students learn to think independently and justify their position.

4. Interdisciplinary integration

Integrating political and legal education with history, sociology, philosophy and political science allows for a comprehensive analysis of processes. This approach helps to understand the social roots of political and legal phenomena[4].

5. Practically oriented education

Cooperation with civil society institutions, courts and law enforcement agencies increases the practical effectiveness of education. Trainings, meetings and practical exercises serve to connect knowledge with real life.

Discussion

The results of the study show that the modernization of the political and legal education system has a direct impact on improving legal culture in society. Competency-based and student-oriented approaches ensure that young people are not indifferent to political processes.

Although digital technologies make the educational process more open and interactive, their effective use depends on the qualifications and technical capabilities of teachers. At the same time, it is important to form the content of education taking into account national values and mentality[5].

Modern approaches do not completely negate traditional educational methods, but rather enrich them with new methods. This harmony ensures the continuity and effectiveness of political and legal education.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the development of the political and legal education system is one of the important factors ensuring the democratic development of society. Political and legal education organized on the basis of modern approaches serves to increase the legal awareness of citizens, increase their political activity and strengthen civil society. Therefore, the widespread introduction of innovative methods and technologies in the education system remains an urgent task.

The development of the political and legal education system requires the introduction of modern pedagogical and innovative approaches. Competency-based, digital, student-oriented and practical approaches serve to form legally aware, politically active and responsible citizens.

The consistent implementation of these approaches is an important condition for building a democratic society, ensuring the rule of law and developing civil society.
